

Summer Work 2016

The November 2016 presidential election season is in full gear this summer. Both of the two major political parties will be holding their nominating conventions this summer, to formalize who each party will be supporting in November. There are also many third party candidates, many of them lesser known, who will be vying for a chance to become president of the United States.

Over the course of this summer, you will need to follow the presidential election news coverage. In particular will need to watch and read about both of the two major parties conventions that will occur in July. On the first day of school you need to be ready to discuss all of the major candidates running for the presidency. While you do not need to take a side on which candidate you would like to support for November's election, you do need to be well versed on the candidates' positions on major topics. You may bring whatever notes or articles you would like with you to the first day of class. On the first day of class we will be having a graded debate on the the presidential election.
